

ABSTRACT

The present application discloses methods and systems for configuring and managing class-based condensation. One aspect thereof includes an automated mechanism for creating classes and grouping requests within the classes. A second aspect includes an automated mechanism for selecting and updating an efficient class base file for each class. A third aspect includes an automated mechanism for maintaining the security of users by excluding private user information from the class base file.